The long and short of it

Believe it or not, there are words in English that are longer than you might expect. In fact, there are words that are longer than most people can write down without making mistakes. Here are some examples:

- Write a word on the board and clarify the meaning. Tell the team that they should form as many different words from that
- Listen to the words as they can. Allow one minute.
- Get feedback and award points accordingly. Award a point for every new word. Five points for a word that is longer than the previous one. Ten points for the team that made the longest word.
- The team with the most points wins.
- Erase the words from the board. Ask students to write down all eight words from memory.
