Dear Colleagues,
Looking for some last-minute ideas that require minimal preparation? A variety of activities awaits you on the pages that follow: a pronunciation game, a conversation at a pub, tennis reviews (p. 2), reconstructing a text (p. 3) and more. In "Talking teaching", we introduce Zed Longstaff, who currently teaches years 3, 4, 5 and 6 in a co-vent and some suggest him. Zed has been teaching for almost 20 years.

Mozza

Language work: Writing, speaking, reading
Preparation: None
Material: "Who exactly is Andy Murray?" (page 9)
Time: 15 minutes

Prepare to display the photo of Andy Murray on page 9.
Ask your class to name some famous male and female tennis players. What qualities made them tennis champions?
Show the image. Can they identify the athletes?
Working on their own, have students write down three things that they know about Andy Murray. They then compare their lists with a partner.

Do a short feedback slot.
Students return to page 9 in their magazines. Read the short text "Who exactly is Andy Murray?" as a class, helping out with pronunciation. Then, in smaller pairs, discuss the life that Andy Murray has led so far. What do you think Murray's life is like today?
Why do professional tennis players usually retire early? Do you think Murray should retire now? And if so, what could he do with his life?
